

Class Size Standards

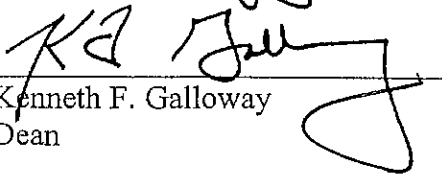

Undergraduate classes (100-299) enrolling fewer than 10 students and graduate classes (300-399) enrolling fewer than 5 students should not be taught under most circumstances.

Faculty members who wish to teach courses not meeting these class size expectations should understand that they do so as an overload; i.e., in addition to their regular teaching assignment.

Exceptions to these standards should be negotiated between the department chairs and the office of the Dean of Engineering.

These standards will be applied beginning with the spring semester of 2001.
